Mutual Assurance.

The kind and the happiest pair
Will find occasion to part,
And wading, every day they live
To pay and perhaps forgive.
But if infirmities that fall
In common to us all—
A heart, a soul, a sense impaired—
Are crimes so little to be spared,
Then farewells all that most create
The comfort of the wedded state;
Instead of harmony, "tis jar,
And tumult, and intestine war.
The love that cleaves her latest stage,
Prost against sickness and old age,
Preserved by virtue and strenuous
Toils, and by the aid of physicians,
But lives, when that exterior grace
Which first inspries the flame decays,
Tis gentle, delicate and kind,
To faults compassionate or blind,
And will with sympathy endure
These evils, and the woes of age;
But many a man and harsh profession
Shows to be a mere profession;
Proves that the heart is none of his,
Or soon despise him if it is.

VARIETY.

Why is ice in a thaw like philanthropy?—Because it gives in all directions.

A handful of common sense is worth a bushel of learning.

A man never has the least difficulty in finding a friend, except when he needs one.

Iron exists in the blood and preserves it; gold, or the love of it, exists in the heart and corrupts it.

Slanders, issuing from beautiful lips, are like spiders crawling from the blushing heart of a rose.

Mosity promoted worth, but conceals it just as leaves and the growth of fruit hide it from view.

To vex another is to vex him to vex us again; ingenuity makes revenge, and even an ant can sting, and a fly trouble our patience.

If one could be conscious of all that is said of him in his absence, he would probably become a very modest man indeed.

"She isn't all that fancy painted her?" bitterly exclaimed a rejected lover; "and, worse than that, she isn't that she paints herself."

An article announcing the decease of a person, says, "His remains were committed to that bourn whence no traveler returns attended by his friends."

A lazy fellow begged alms, saying that he could not work, and that he had lost his tools.

Industrious mechanic, "I am obliged to work for it."

It seems to me that I have seen your physiognomy somewhere before," said a swell to a stranger whom he met the other day; "but I cannot imagine where."

"Very likely," replied the other; "I have been the keeper of a prison for the last twenty years."

A Canadian paper, alluding to the "body" of Sumpter, professedly said, "The body" (nobody was more dead) "was found in Sampson's because it was too far south for sleighing." Did you ever!

A jolly old Doctor said that people who were prompt in their payments always recovered in their sickness, as they were good customers, and physicians could not afford to lose them. A good hint and a sensible doctor.

"Speaking of shaving," said a pretty girl to an obscure old bachelor, "I should think that a pair of hairpins would be the best mirror to shave by."

"Yes, very many a poor fellow has been shaven by them," the wretched replied.

The SUPPLY STORE.—Twenty clerks in a store, Twenty hands in a printing office, Twenty young men in a village. All want to do something, and do it well. One of the clerks will rise to be a partner, and make a fortune. One of the competitors will own a newspaper, and become a prosperous and influential citizen. One of the village gulls will get a handsome farm and live like a patriarch. But which is destined to be the lucky individual? That is the question.
